UTAH AND IRRIGATION.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT that Franklin S. Richards has gone to Washington as a special envoy from Utah to look into the question of national aid for irrigation will be of interest to every citizen of the state. Mr. Richards has made a careful study of irrigation matters and with probably as familiar with the subject as any man who could have been selected.

His special object at this time is to ascertain exactly what the department of the interior wishes the irrigators of Utah to do in order that they may enjoy the benefits of the national irrigation law. Mr. Richards, unfortunately, is not prepared to say to the department that Utah is united on a single plan. If this were true his mission would hardly have been necessary.

The proposition which has commended itself to all irrigators except a single canal company is the one which contemplates an increase in the reservoir capacity of Utah lake. For reasons best known to the men who own it, the North Jordan Canal company has steadfastly and stubbornly refused to consent to this plan and has so far succeeded in impeding the progress of all negotiations with the government.

The department need not say to the Utah project on this account, however. As pointed out by State Engineer Doremus, a precedent that fits this case almost exactly has been established by a ruling in the Salt River (Arizona) case. There it was decided that all parties in interest need not agree to a specified plan, but those who did not agree would not be a party to the project.

The North Jordan company has rights in the stream and storage rights in the lake as well. An increase in the capacity of the lake will assuredly not lessen the supply of the North Jordan people. Their rights will, therefore, not be taken away from them, but the interests of the public will be looked after also. The Herald sincerely hopes Mr. Richards will be assured by the proper authorities that the Utah lake work will be proceeded with regardless of the opposition of the belligerent company.

This would seem to be the only fair and reasonable course to pursue. The good of the majority should always be considered first, especially when the working of good to the majority will bring no harm whatever to any minority, great or small. If we are to have the benefits of national irrigation at all it is our duty to insist on having them now. There is no reason why a State that is the pioneer in irrigation should be kept in the background because of a few ill advised objectors.

TO A RURAL CONTEMPORARY.

OUR ESTEEMED contemporary, the Emery County Progress, can't little forgive Salt Lake for being slightly larger than Castle Dale, the little city having the honor to be the home of the Progress. We are more careful than we can find words to express over this unhappy condition. It grieves us sorely to think that the Progress and its estimable editor do not like Salt Lake, but we shall bear up as best we can. A sample of the feelings of the Progress is found in the subjoined excerpt from a recent issue: "Something akin to real enthusiasm is said to be manifested by Salt Lake City's one-horse bunch of pretended business men over the announcement that Senator Clark is really going to connect Sleepers with Los Angeles. One enthusiast proposes to pass the hat and in this way raise a few dimes to establish a great iron manufacturing enterprise in Dreamland. A hat was passed there last week to raise a few hundred dollars to keep the public schools running, but outside of 7 cents contributed by nervous and nervous-looking boys the scheme died a born-in. When Salt Lake City amounts to anything—if that time should ever come—it will be after the hat has been lifted a right draft for the bunch of knackers and grafters (except business men) that infest that old sleepy burg, and a set of real men is brought in."

Seriously, now, we wonder what the Progress hopes to gain by such snatches little flings as the one quoted. Does it believe it will be able to induce Salt Lake to emigrate to Castle Dale? Does it hope to change the tide of immigration from Salt Lake to the thriving metropolis of Emery county? If so, we may commend the lofty ambitions of the Progress, though we must condemn its waste of energy.

The Progress, and a number of other state papers, too, by the way, do not seem to realize that they cannot better conditions in their own communities by ill-natured thrusts at Salt Lake City. In the first place there is about as little truth in the average unkindly criticism of the city from the country as there is in the reference of the Progress to the public school fund matter. In the second place a friendly feeling should always be maintained between city and country.

Let us remember, brethren, that we need one another. The country might possibly get along without the city, at a pinch, but it would have a hard row to hoe in the accomplishment. We frankly admit that the city could not possibly get along without the country. At the same time we must insist that if the country newspaper pays strict attention to the building up of its own community—and most of them do—has on hand an order sufficiently large to keep it from worrying about affairs outside.

AS TO HOT WINDS.

THE HERALD has received from a correspondent a copy of the Chardon (Neb.) Times, containing a communication from F. B. Carley in regard to the hot winds that often destroy the growing crops in Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado and occasionally in a limited section of southern Utah. Mr. Carley's theory is that the winds come off of the Arizona desert.

He says the rips of the sun, beating down on the desert in the summer season, cause an ascension of hot air in large quantities, the volume finally becoming so great that it is blown away to the north and east, and cutting a swath of destruction. One who has never experienced a hot wind cannot appreciate what it means. The air feels as if it came directly out of a fiery furnace.

Dwellers in its wake are forced to close their doors and windows, even in the hottest weather, for any shelter, however warm and close, is preferable to the blasts outside. Growing corn a foot, two feet high, is withered in a few hours, wheat stalks shrivel and die, and vegetation of every character suffers almost beyond repair. It has never occurred to anyone before that these winds can be stopped. They have been accepted as dispensations of Providence, from which there is no way of escaping.

Mr. Carley points out what he believes to be the way. He says: "It will be remembered that a few years ago the Colorado river in time of flood turned its channel so as to empty the greater part of its waters into this desert, which is lower than the river bed. If the Colorado river in time of flood would change its channel so as to empty into this desert, it would certainly not cost a great sum for the government to change its flow permanently, and thereby convert the great Arizona desert into an inland sea."

"It may be argued that the river would not fill the desert, for the reason that the water would seep away, but I believe that the sediment of the river deposited in the desert would stop the seepage and in the course of a few years it would fill. The sands of the desert would at least be moist, instead of dry, and this would in a great measure temper the wind to the short lamb."

The Herald has no information as to the feasibility of Mr. Carley's plan, but it seems worth looking into. At least enough of the water might be diverted to make possible the cultivation of sections of the desert which are now but barren wastes, and this might have the desired effect on the hot winds.

SOLVING THE SERVANT PROBLEM.

CHICAGO SEEMS to be the home of a liberal proportion of the people who are trying hard to solve the servant problem. Recently the builder of an apartment house announced that he would have a servants' hall on the first floor. In this hall, or quarters, every possible modern convenience and luxury will be installed. There will be porcelain baths, a gymnasium, billiard room, parlor, library and many other things along the same line.

The builder hopes by this method that his tenants will be able to secure servants and keep them. And if he carries out all of his promises it would certainly seem that the domestic servant problem should have all the permanent building should have all the permanent help they need. Indeed, domestics, male and female, should tumble over one another looking for work in such a building, for it is designed primarily, secondarily and all the rest of the time for their special comfort and convenience.

Another bait having its origin in Chicago has been thrown out by the president of one of the women's clubs in the Illinois metropolis. The president is Mrs. Howard Kretschmar, who believes the word "servant" is entirely too harsh to use in connection with household workers for pay. Mrs. Kretschmar suggests such fetching titles as "spinster of dishwashing," "mistress of cooking," "doctress of general housework" and so on down the line.

Doubtless a lady sailing under the title of "professors" of the six-hole steel range" would find the same work much easier than she would if she labored under the handicap of being called a plain cook. How much more blithely the housemaid would go about her labors if she could attach the mystic letters, S. A. S. S., to her name. The letters, as will be understood at once, stand for Sister of the American Society of Sweepers.

Any buller could butte more properly and with more self respect if he were called "professor" instead of plain John, or Peter or something else equally familiar. To The Herald it seems that herein lies the solution of the servant problem. Let us banish the word "servant" from our bright lexicon and straightaway our troubles will come to an end.

The Herald desires to acknowledge its appreciation of the following editorial paragraph which was published by its sprightly and esteemed contemporary, the Salt Lake Telegram, yesterday afternoon:

"The Herald's campaign against Victoria alley was a splendid piece of journalistic enterprise. This paper has now turned its attention to Commercial street and the dirt which is conducted in that section. Newspaper work of this kind is in the line of public service. It is a good thing for a city, and for that reason the Telegram joins with its enterprising contemporary in the demand that Chief Sheets do a little housecleaning in this section of industry."

In his determination to drive all the pseudo pugilists out of town Chief Sheets should have the hearty support of every citizen. This class of gentles is responsible for more petty crime than any other, and the city will be better off for the absence of all of them.

Brother-in-law Squires has come to the defense of Major Glenn of water cure torture infamy. In an open letter Mr. Squires comments caustically on General Miles' remarks on conditions in the Philippines. However, he fails to show that General Miles was wrong in a single instance.

Senator Smoot says he is glad to be in St. Louis. Well, so are we, if that's any comfort to the senator.

We may now expect Editor Hearst to organize another symposium for the purpose of proving that marriage is not a failure.

Now that Ogden has deposited his Baseball forfeit let us get as busy as we can picking out a team that will make the Junction City long for the good old days.

A Harvard professor has trailed the smallpox germ to its lair. If he'll attach a can to the insect he will confer a great favor on a troubled people, for mighty few of us know a smallpox germ when we meet it on the highway.

SOCIETY.

The Porter reception at the Kenyon last evening was one of the most elaborate and elegant affairs of the spring season. The event was arranged as a post nuptial party, and the many friends of the young people thronged the parlors, extending good wishes to the bride and groom. Receiving with them were the father of the bride, Mr. Alfred Berach of Chicago; Miss Berach, and Madame Porter, the grandmother of the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Don Porter were unavoidably detained in Los Angeles. Assisting in the hall at the punch bowl were Miss McIntyre and the Misses Kinney, and at the head of the stairs an orchestra discoursed sweet music. The receiving party stood in the large parlor, and from there the guests wandered through the long corridors and found their way to the dining room, where refreshments were served at small tables, each of which was decorated in the prevailing colors—green and white. Palms and potted plants formed the main decoration in the halls, and in the parlors white flowers were used in profusion with the green of the palms. About 500 guests called during the evening.

Last evening at 8 o'clock was solemnized the marriage of Mrs. Mary L. Herriman, formerly of Hannibal, Mo., and Mr. A. C. Smith. The ceremony was performed by Dr. W. M. Paden, assisted by the Rev. Mr. McNeely, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Dunbar. Only the most intimate friends of the bride and groom were present, and the service was a most simple and beautiful one. Preceding the ceremony Miss Martha Binford rendered an air from "Tannhauser." Miss Edna Duncan sang "Mary of Argyle," accompanied on the harp by Mrs. Walter Tuttle, and throughout the wedding service Mrs. Tuttle played softly some songs by Mendelssohn. At the close of the service the bride and groom received the congratulations of their friends and later a wedding supper was served. The home was beautifully decorated, a bank of white and green forming a background for the bride and groom. The bride wore a gown of pale gray French crepe, with a bertha and sleeve trimmings of Irish point lace. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will make their home in this city.

One of the prettiest luncheons of the season was that given yesterday by Mrs. R. H. Channing in honor of Mrs. Theodore A. Baldwin. The table was decorated entirely in marguerites, and covers were laid for eight. The guests present to meet Mrs. Baldwin were Mrs. Sturgis, Mrs. David E. Murray, Mrs. Robert B. Harkness, Mrs. Louise Smedley Smith, Miss Burke, Miss Dooley and the Misses Noble.

Mrs. W. H. McIntyre will entertain at a Kensington this afternoon at her home on Seventh street.

Mr. Leon Mayer has returned from Chicago.

Mrs. David W. C. will entertain this afternoon for Mrs. Styer, instead of Wednesday, as at first planned.

Miss Payne is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Peabody for the week.

Mrs. F. J. Guthrie has gone to Lincoln, Neb., to spend the early summer with friends.

Miss Simpson of New York has come to spend the summer with her brother and sister, Dr. and Mrs. Henry La Motte.

Miss Mayer of Chicago is in the city and is visiting her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Mayer, on East Second South street.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Montague Perry have returned from Kansas City.

The girls of Rowland hall will have a May day frolic with outdoor sports at that institution Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Miss Edna Duncan will leave Saturday for her week's visit with Miss Margaret Johnston in Pocatello.

LADIES' KID GLOVES.

Two clasp, one-ream kid gloves in black, white, red, navy, mode, tan and brown. Do you know that most of the goats from whose skin fine gloves are made come from the Swiss Alps? The little fellows are exactly 21 days old when their lives are yielded to fashion's demand. The second best quality comes from the Pyrenees. Men are sent out and the goats are bought from herders. Later the goats are assembled, slaughtered and their hides shipped to done by means of oil and sunshine—miles and miles of clothes lines laden with hides wave greeting to the sun's bright rays. Then they go to a dining room. Through chemical invention the black shades are obtained—an invention successfully perfected by only few men through whose hands the gloves which we handle pass. Big boxes of bark, gathered from the majestic forests of lands where the goat is man seldom trots make possible the different colors. The largest glove manufactory is in France, from whence our gloves, in sizes from 6 to 8, and which are regularly sold for $1.25, come. We are selling them today at .....
